doing at one time. I think they used to spray all the road ditches and probably don't do that. They do more mowing because of even the environmental issues with some of the wildlife. But I think some of the...some of the aspects of what the noxious weed program does is that they...got too many papers here. Okay, they oversight...provide a lot of oversight for the counties to help them and even education. They do identify noxious weeds in order to identify them maybe with somebody from the...personnel from the department to go out and do this where the counties maybe do not have the programs to do it anymore, and then can take care of it appropriately from that. All right. Here we are. I found it. They designate noxious weeds and appropriate control measures. They monitor county noxious weed authority implementation of the act, and they intervene when counties fail to adequately carry out the program. They convene a noxious weed control advisory committee to advise the department in implementation of the act. They provide educational training and technical assistance in weed control. They conduct annual surveys of noxious weed infectious...infection levels, and they publish information and materials that represent Nebraska in various associations and forums. So they do have a real purpose and maybe, as the funds get down, that they will have to even cut down on the personnel that they have and do less what they...less than they are now, maybe as we even get noxious weeds cleaned up somewhat. But I think it's very important that they're able to address a potential noxious weed and it's much less expensive at that time in...rather than letting it get out of hand. The way I understand, we had support, the bill had support from the Environmental Trust Fund, and Mary Harding testified, I think, some of the times that even the counties can apply for grants. When a...the noxious weed, the program that we're authorizing the department to do, when they apply for a grant, they're in line just like anyone else for the grants. They designate their high priorities, and I think they're just in the process now of designating the priorities. And it's...I think that it's very likely that the noxious weeds will be up in the high priorities. So it's something that they wanted to do and was very appropriate that we could be able to apply for those grants and just be in line like everybody else, and then they would identify the ones that they thought were the most appropriate.
